

Non-State Schools Accreditation Board

Complaints about non-state schools, governing bodies, or unaccredited places

Education (Accreditation of Non-State Schools) Act 2017

Form CCNGU-F V.2

Important information before you begin

The role of the Board

The Board operates under the Education (Accreditation of Non-State Schools) Act 2017 (the Accreditation Act).

The Board's functions include:

- deciding the accreditation of non-state schools
- deciding the eligibility for government funding of governing bodies for accredited non-state schools
- monitoring accredited non-state schools and their governing bodies
- examining whether a place is being operated as, or held out as, a school without Board accreditation.

The Board is authorised to deal with your concern only if it is within the Board's legislative jurisdiction.

The Board is not a tribunal or industry ombudsman.

What the Board can consider

The Board is authorised to only consider matters related to whether a non-State school, or its governing body, is complying with the requirements of the Act.

For example, matters the Board may consider include:

- suitability of the governing body to govern the school
- the school being operated for profit (if eligible for government funding).
- the school's administration and governance, financial viability, educational program, student welfare processes, resources and improvement processes
- operating a school without accreditation by the Board
- holding out a school as being an accredited school if it is not accredited by the Board.

What the Board cannot consider

If your complaint is about any of the following matters, the Board will be unable to assist:

- student fees and charges, student awards, student homework, student reports and grades, students repeating year levels, enrolments
- allocation of teachers/teacher aides, a teacher's conduct or capability to teach
- contractual disputes

Before deciding whether to make a complaint

All non-state schools are required to have their own complaints management policies and procedures. At first instance, complaints should be raised with the school or its governing body.

Where you are dissatisfied with the decision made by a non-state school

The Board cannot review, remake or overturn a decision made by a non-state school or its governing body. The Board's role is limited to considering whether the school's written processes comply with legislative requirements and were properly followed when making the decision.

When raising a complaint

- Be informed about the Board's role and what is within its authority
- Provide all particulars and details you have about the non-compliance so the Board can properly assess the issue
- Be aware that the information you disclose to the Board may be a 'public interest disclosure' under the Public Interest Disclosure Act 2010.

How long does the complaints process take?

There are a range of reasons why some complaints can take longer than others to progress. The Board will contact you at various times to update you on the status of your complaint.

Privacy information

Information about the collection of personal information on this form can be found in section 4.

Lodgement

Submit the form to the Board via email to nssab.admin@qed.qld.gov.au or post to Non-State Schools Accreditation Board, PO Box 15347, City East Qld 4002.

Mandatory fields are marked with *.

Notification of the outcome of a complaint

The Board will notify you of the conclusion of its investigation. Due to the strict confidentiality obligations imposed on the Board by the Accreditation Act for certain situations, the Board may not be able to advise you of the particulars of its investigation or the outcome.

Further information

Refer to the Board's website for information about raising a compliance concern with the Board, its relating policy and procedures for managing compliance concerns and fact sheet.
